

Susan Ruach

Susan Ruach began her love of photography nearly thirty years ago as a way to share the beauty she saw on her travels around the world. Her photographic art has developed to include abstract photography, macro work, and nature images, intended to invite the viewer into deeper reflection.

Susan teaches workshops on Spirituality and Photography. Her students explore the connections between nature and spirit and learn how photography can be a part of one's spiritual journey.

Susan has photographed in France, Canada, Peru, Ecuador, China, Korea, Nepal, Israel, England, Scotland, Mexico, Spain, Nicaragua, Zimbabwe, and South Africa, and in almost every state in the United States.

Creative

"My name might help others understand my photography. Many married couples consider keeping their own names or hyphenating their names. Richard and I decided to choose a new name. We chose Ruach – which means breath, spirit, or wind."

Understands Life

"My images invite viewers to breathe more deeply, go beneath the surface to feel and think more deeply, and wander inside their souls to seek their Spirit and touch the Mystery."

Sees Beyond Brokenness

“Photography helps me switch perspectives. When I zoom a lens in or out, or take two steps a different direction, my perspective changes. This is great practice for me in my spiritual journey, because what I am trying to do is switch from my own perspective to Divine perspective. Photography also teaches me how to shift my attitude, my understanding of the world and others, my place in the universe and to see the world differently.”
