

Aida

Badass Woman

Grow Where You're Planted

Walls

Cynthia Brody has been an exhibiting artist for over forty years. She combines photo imagery with acrylic paints and found materials to create allegorical stories and moods. Themes represented include: love, relationships with men and children, and the place of women within society.

Her works incorporate elements of beauty contrasted with the strong statements and pensive attitudes of the women depicted. Photographs are used out of context for their texture and then combined with acrylic paint to give the illusion of something familiar. It is only upon closer inspection that the viewer recognizes the foreign elements.

Ms. Brody is also a psychotherapist practicing in Lexington, Massachusetts. Her interest in the psyche is reflected in her artwork.