

Kay Sullivan

Kitchen Garden

Birthday Garden

“Living in rural Maine for more than a decade, I have found delight in watching and documenting nature’s rhythms and cycles on the land that surrounds my home. In my gardens, I spend far more time drawing, painting, and taking note of the growth and changes of light than weeding or harvesting.”

Garden Conversation

“My drawings and paintings are meditations on this familiar place and the passing of time. Being present in this landscape year after year, I have come to recognize early signs of change: an angle of light, a warming just before spring, the fading of late summer.”

Poppy Garden

Yellow Garden Sky

“Through the movement of my hand, in my lines and patterns on the page, I make my connection with nature’s energy. These marks are the evidence I leave, the history of my time here in this place.”